1. Those in which the German and English forms correspond exactly: e.g. Alfred, Alfred; Richard, Richard; London, London; Hamburg, Hamburg, etc., etc.

2. Those names of countries in which the German terminations -ien, -ika, correspond to the English -ia, -ica: e.g. Asien, Asia; Indien, India; Skandinavien, Scandinavia, etc., etc.

It should also be noticed that where the difference between the English and German forms is very slight, the names usually occur in the English-German part only. Names of rivers which are the same in both languages appear in the English-German part, where the German gender is shown.
